Chief Wilkie Hands Out Some Tips for Those Shopping Abroad

DANGER FOR SMUGGLERS

Evading Customs Officers Has Become as Perilous as Counterfeiting.

Chief Wilkie's Rules for Shopping in a Foreign Country

i. Remember that the United States has a tariff law which works all year around.

2. He very cautions in buying furs, laces, diamonds and precious stones, rugs, paintings or antique furniture of foreign shopkeepers, unless you are an expert. You are likely to be swindled.

3. Reware of shopkeepers who offer fake hills of sale to be presented at the American customhouse. Use of these hills is likely to get you into trouble.

4. Heware of the foreign "hargmin." It is not always what it seems.

5. Don't try to heat the American

5. Don't try to sear and safest customs,
6. Pollow the honest and safest course of shipping your purchases openly, at actual valuations, directly to your residence, paying duty upon receipt of them. There is a port or subport near every American home.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Washington. February 24.—Chief
John A. Wilkie, of the Secret Service, who is now also in charge of the special agents for the customs service,
and who has made commercial and polite snuggling in this country as dangerous as counterfeiting, after a long and varied career as a chaser of rewspaper "stories" and, later, of crooks, blossomed out to-day as an adviser to the fair sex on shopping worthy of a prominent place on the woman's page.
"Dainty Things for the Dressing

"Dainty Things for the Dressing Parity Thinks for the Dressing Table," or "Seen in the Shops for Dainty Femininity" would hardly be appropriate headings for the chief's column on the woman's page, however. A head line right to the point would be: "How to Buy Things in Europe and Keep Out of Jail."

The chief has "Seen".
